A Massachusetts man has been awarded a medal for saving nine lives. No, it wasn't a cat.

Senator A. J. C. Butler has committed suicide, but it is possible the senator wasn't to blame for that.

We thoroughly agree with the esteemed Baltimore Sun that being hit by a comet's tail is not nearly as bad as being kicked by a mule.

Just as though Halley's Comet was not trouble enough for one year, it is now claimed that this is the year for the visit of the seventeen year locusts.

Lost, strayed or stolen the tail of Halley's Comet. Anyone, who can give any information in regard to same, please report to any astronomer.

There's a ship without a rudder and a mast without a sail; but the saddest thing in all the world is a shirt without a button or a comet without a tail.

"Much ado about nothing," would seem to have been all of the talk about what would happen when the earth passed through the tail of Halley's Comet.

The claims of the Gazette that candidates for the nomination for the different county offices on the Republican ticket used money in the primary election last week is absolutely false and when the fact is taken into consideration that very few of the candidates had any opposition it is ludicrous. The candidates who had no opposition certainly would not spend money to secure a nomination and where there were contests, a fair and honorable but friendly fight was waged. The only reason that we can imagine for the Gazette making such a foolish charge is to attempt to cover the apathy that prevails in the Democratic ranks and divert attention from the fact that only a handful of Democrats turned out to the primary.

Auto Law Unconstitutional.

The circuit court at Washington, D. C., last week held unconstitutional that part of the "automobile law" which authorizes the bringing of an action for damages in the county where the injured party resides. The question arose in the case of F. M. Allen, of Washington, D. C., vs. T. T. Smith, of Leesburg, Wilson & McBride of this place, representing the defendant and raising the point. Allen was injured last fall when he was thrown from his buggy, the result of his horse frightening at Smith's auto. Suit for $20,000 damages was brought in Fayette county and summons was issued and served on Smith in this county. The law provides for the bringing of an action where an accident occurs by reason of an automobile, in the county in which the plaintiff resides. The court holds that this law is void because it is in conflict with the uniformity section of the State Constitution and the 14th amendment to the Federal Constitution.

This ruling means that in automobile accidents as in other suits the plaintiff will be compelled to bring suit in the county in which the defendant resides and can not compel the defendant to leave his own county to defend an action.

A Present Need—A Few Trust Makers in Jail, Says Taft.

(From an interview with the President in the June McClure's.)
The serious difficulty in prosecuting men or corporations for creating monopolies comes, as a matter of fact—in criminal cases, not from the lack of convincing evidence, but from the reluctance of juries to send the individual offender for what he has done. His acts are newly created crimes; they are mala prohibita, not mala in se. It is easy for the average citizen to declaim about what should be done to the makers of trusts, but when he is actually in the jury-box, he finds it very difficult to send a man to jail for practices that, until within a comparatively short time, have been considered legitimate and clever.

In one of the foremost recent trust prosecutions, virtually all of the evidence secured by the Government was based upon the conduct of one man the president of the offending corporation; yet, when the jury came to render its verdict, this man was free and the corporation was fined. This is unfortunate, for, in my opinion nothing would stop this building up of monopolies more quickly than the conviction of some of the individuals who created them by their illegal acts.

Will The Nations Have To Fight?

In 1800 France had 4,000,000 more population than Germany. At that time both nations occupied approximately the same amount of territory, about 200,000 square miles each. The density of population in France was 134 to the square mile; in Germany it was 113.

In the last hundred years the fertility of the German nation has been so great that, in spite of the fact that it has sent more than 6,000,000 emigrants to the United States and millions more to other foreign countries, it has increased its home population to 64,000,000, nearly triple the number in 1800. During the same period the population of France, which has sent practically no immigrants abroad, has increased by less than fifty per cent. And it should be remembered in spite of Alsace and Lorraine, the territory of the two nations has remained practically the same—approximately 200,000 square miles each.

At present the density of population in the German empire is 303 to the square mile. What means may be grasped by considering that if the United States was as thickly settled as Germany is at the present time we should have 900,000,000 people—ten times our present population. In other words, the present density of population in the United States is only thirty to the square mile.

Where and how shall the immensely virile and fertile Germanic race find a new home and a new empire over seas? Or will it, with the greatest army in the world at its command and a tremendous war fleet in the making, sit tight within its narrow boundaries at home until famine and pestilence sap its vitality and reduce its numbers? It may do that; it may allow millions of its sons to renounce their allegiance to the fatherland, or it may—the last terrible alternative—is the one of which the world stands in dread.

Is it true then that after all the talk of commercial supremacy, national honor and high ideals, the real cause of the waiting war may be found in the primal instinct of swarming from the overcrowded hive? Is racial fertility at the bottom of the coming struggle?—From "Racial Fertility and War," in June Technical World Magazine.

Safe and Sane Fourth.

A movement is on foot to have the Fourth of July celebration here in a "safe and sane" manner.

Every year after the celebration of the nation's birthday long lists of the killed and injured are published in the papers. This list is made up of children largely and every community has one or more accidents.

While we are accustomed to celebrating the "Fourth" with fireworks, and the day will hardly seem to have been appropriately remembered without something of the kind, still it would not take long to get use to celebrating the day in a safe way, and certainly it is not necessary to have many children maimed and injured for life in order to fittingly rejoice on the nation's natal day.

If it is not too bitterly opposed council will pass an ordinance prohibiting the sale of fireworks and the exploding of them within the village, except under proper restrictions.

Many children will, of course, be disappointed if they cannot have their firecrackers, torpedoes, etc., and many parents may hate to refuse them this pleasure, but if all accidents can thus be prevented on the day after many a home which otherwise might be in sorrow over the loss or injury of some member of the family may be happy.

Surely it is not necessary to maim and kill the children in order to fittingly celebrate the day of the nation's birth.

Let us try the "safe and sane" manner of celebrating one year and see if it is not a great improvement over the old way.

Why "High Standard" Paint Saves Users Money

Look at these paddles. One was "High Standard"—the other a cheap hand-mixed compound. Both were applied at the same time, and subjected to the same weather conditions.

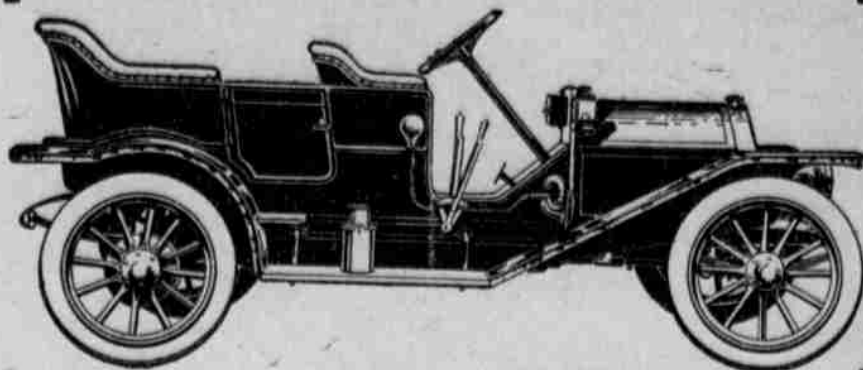

Low Brothers High Standard Liquid Paint

shows no signs of wear. The cheap paint has cracked, peeled and faded. It needs re-painting, while "High Standard" is still good for years.

You can't afford to let a few cents extra cost per gallon blind you to the true economy of "High Standard." Its greater hiding power, brilliance and wear will make it cheaper, even at $2.00 a gallon. The new color combinations are ready. Come in and see them, also Melitone—a new interior finish; Verpico, Interior Enamels and other products bearing the Little Blue Flag.
